The Center for Autism to Host Annual Award Dinner — Casino Night to benefit organization and honor David St.Clair—

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., March 2, 2007 - The Center for Autism will host its Small Miracles Award Dinner on April 18th at the Park Hyatt Philadelphia at the Bellevue at 6:00 p.m. David St.Clair, founder and CEO of MEDecision, will receive the Small Miracles Award in recognition of his years of dedicated service to the Center.

“This event is significant to the Center and all who contribute to its success,” said Jean Ruttenberg, executive director of the Center for Autism. “We are proud to honor David St.Clair’s commitment to the Center and affirm our mission of providing vital resources to individuals with autism.”

A member of the Center for Autism’s board of directors for more than 20 years, St.Clair has provided expertise in business development and served in an important leadership role. His dedication to the Center has been a vital asset in the organization’s progress and success.

St.Clair founded MEDecision in 1988 to provide healthcare payer organizations with software, services and clinical content that allow them to increase administrative efficiency and improve the overall quality and affordability of their members' healthcare. In 1999 and 2000, St.Clair was recognized by ADVANCE for Health Information Executives as one of the most influential people in the healthcare information systems industry. He holds a master’s degree from Harvard Business School and bachelor of applied science in mechanical engineering from the University of Pennsylvania. St.Clair and his wife, Gail, currently reside in Narberth, Pa.

The Small Miracles Award Dinner will feature a casino night, auction and award ceremony. Proceeds will support the organization’s services for the autistic community.

About The Center for Autism
